James Gordon Bennett is in communication with the Navy Department regarding Arctic exploration, and proposed converting the yacht Dauntless, into a screw steamer and sending her to the North Pole by way of Spitzbergen, asking only that the Navy Department furnish officers, men and provisions for the voyage. The Jeanette, which Mr. Bennett has fitted out for the Arctic Sea by way of Behring's Straits, is now on her way to San Francisco.

Special dispatches from Rome say: Four thousand people were present at the annexation meeting a few weeks since. Some accounts represent that the principal object of the meeting was a Republican demonstration. In the evening a demonstration was made before the Austrian Embassy.

General Garibaldi telegraphed as follows: "Enslaved people have the right to revolt. Men of Trieste take to the mountains!"

A dispatch dated July 25th from Mexico to the Grant County Herald says that McSweeney with sixty three men stole into the town of Lincoln on the night of the 19th. The Sheriff's posse returned from serving warrants and demanded the surrender of all persons for whom he had U. S. and Territorial warrants. McSweeney called out that they would die before surrender. The fight then commenced and lasted eight hours. The McSweeney party finally retreated having had eight killed, McSweeney among the number. Many were wounded. Two thousand shots were fired. The McSweeney party were in his house when the fight began. McSweeney told some of his men that he was Sheriff, and ordered them to go as his posse to arrest Peppin's party. The Sheriff's posse was fully as strong as the force under McSweeney.

The passage in Lord Beaconsfield's speech at the Carlton Club banquet, which attracted most attention is that leveled at Gladstone, and it is expected this incident will increase the bitterness of the coming debate.

A strange preacher occupied the pulpit in the Elko church a few days since, and graphically described the scene where Paul was brought into the presence of King Agrippa. He quoted the words of Festus, "Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning hath made thee mad" and continued: "And Paul, gazing upon the speaker, his features lit up with an emotion not born of earth, cried out in a voice that thrilled the entire assemblage, 'Oh, noble Festus'—(boy on the outside, 'Wh-a-n-d do you so-o-y?' The minister did not even take time to explain that those were not Paul's words, but plunged at once into a stinging lecture, that lasted just forty seven minutes, on the sin of laughing in church.

The doctors are a particularly formidable part of the population at Hot Springs, Ark. They swarm. Their shingles disturb the atmosphere in one almost unbroken line in the business part of the town. Some of them are great gushers, particularly when they prescribe for patients of the gentle and more irritable sex. The "gushers" address ladies whom they have never seen before as "my dear," "my dear little sufferer," "my nervous baby" and "my darling," administering meanwhile a variety of endearing little pats and caresses, and finally winding up with a gratuitous kiss or so. It is needless to say that among persons who prefer dignity and decorum to disagreeable donkeyism the "gushers" do not take high rank, but they rake in money as easily as Maud Muller raked the hay.

The poet says: "Tis sweet to hear the watch-dog's gentle bark." It is, eh? When a man is standing away out in the center of a melon patch at midnight in the dark of the moon, and hears "the watch-dog's gentle bark" but a few feet in his rear, and fully realizes that he has on his thin linen pants, the voice of the angel Gabriel calling the defendants to trial would pan out more sweetness to the square inch than the "gentle bark" of a million watch-dogs.

"But I pass," said a minister in the west, recently, in dismissing one theme of his subject to take up another. "Then I make it spades," yelled a man from the gallery, who was dreaming the happy hours away in an imaginary game of euchre. It is needless to say that he went out on the next day, being assisted by one of the deacons with a full hand of clubs.

In some parts of southern Missouri and Kansas the weather last week was so intensely hot during the day that out door work had to be suspended, a considerable part of the harvesting being done by moonlight.

At Omaha there has been a severe money war. Three out of four banks have refused to receive Mexican or trade dollars on deposit, and the Union Pacific Railroad Company has instructed all its agents and conductors not to receive Mexican or trade dollars except at a discount of ten per cent. The First National continues to handle this coin as usual, and has just received a large shipment of trade dollars from San Francisco.

We love to lie beneath the shade
And quaff the cooling lemonade;
We love to feel the cheerful sun
Crawl calmly up our summer pants;
We love to see the apple worm
Prone on our shirt front squeam and squirm;
We love to watch with placid eye
The doodlebug go tumbling by;
We love to hear in distant frogs
The rufled rumbling of the frogs;
We love to hear the slimy snake
Wind in and out the verdant brake;
We love to hear the chirpy cry
Of bubble bees hum humbling by;
We love to scent upon the air
The balm of squashes bailing there,
With ivory trailing all the land
And poison oak on every hand;
Far from the city's dusty strife,
How sweet to lead a rural life!

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

HAYING—Is one of the most important operations of every farmer. The improved machinery now in use render the labor comparatively easy to what it was a few years ago but it does not provide against storms or rain, which injures the crop a great deal after it is once out. Of late years the custom of cutting the hay one day, stacking it the next, has become common. Hay left to the scorching rays of a hot sun, until dry, possesses but little of the nutritive value, and keeps no better than that stacked greener. We prefer to begin cutting just as it begins to bloom. It is a little to soon perhaps, to get the greatest weight; but, before the whole crop can be secured, that left to the last will be overripe. We salt liberally and never yet lost a stack by putting it up too green. The appliances for unloading hay, both in the barn and on the stack are so simple and inexpensive that every farmer should have one.

A California man has adopted for several years past, a new method of sowing wheat. He fastens a common sack of wheat in front of him on horseback, attaches his feet to guide the reins, and uses both hands in throwing the grain broadcast, right and left, in such quantities as suits him. Being elevated from the ground, the seed obtains a wide spread. He says he can sow twenty acres a day, without much fatigue in this way.

CORN STARCH—A secret not known to many housekeepers is that a tablespoonful of corn starch is equal to one egg in cake baking; if you must have four eggs and you only have two, add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, and you will have a cake as light and as good as the one with four eggs.

SPIT-PEA SOUP—A pound of bacon, a pound of split peas, a small onion cut in slices; put together in a pot with a quart and a half of water; let it boil slowly for an hour and a half; salt and pepper to suit taste. This makes a cheap and excellent soup. Fry cubes of bread brown in butter and serve with soup.

A GOOD WHITEWASH—Slack a half bushel of unslacked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process; strain it and add a peck of salt dissolved in warm water, three pounds of rice boiled until it is a thin paste, half a pound of Spanish whiting, and a pound of clear glue dissolved in warm water. Mix these well together and let stand several days.

A young woman had a man arrested in London lately on a charge of kissing her. He said he was the father of seven children and wouldn't do such a thing. That seems to have settled it and he was discharged.

A School girl in Ann Arbor took her lovers as a theme for an essay, which she read on the commencement day, much to the astonishment of the assembly. She gave the name of her lovers, and described minutely the various stages of courtship.
